Big Lockheed-Electra Comes Down 20 Miles From London at 12:10

MEN TO RETURN THURSDAY

News Pictures of Dirigible Disaster Are Banned

LONDON, May 10 — (UP) — Dick Merrill, completing a successful transatlantic flight from New York to England, landed at 12:10 p. m. EST at Northweald, Royal Air Force airdrome in Essex.

The air ministry, which made the announcement, said Merrill set off immediately for Croydon, his ultimate objective.

Northweald airdrome is about 20 miles northeast of London.

Merrill and John S. Lambie, his co-pilot, took off from Floyd Bennett field, New York City, at 3:36 p. m. (EST) yesterday, promising their friends that they would return on Thursday with the first pictures of the coronation of King George VI.

The twin-motored Lockheed-Electra, capable of top speed of 210 miles an hour, followed the great circle route.

Delay Not Explained

Merrill had estimated that the eastbound flight would take about 18 hours, which should have brought him to Croydon airfield soon after 9:30 a. m. EST. Cause for his delay was not given.

The flight, backed by Ben Smith and Mike Bergen, Wall Street operators, is for the sole purpose of flying coronation pictures to New York. Merrill's contract calls for him to leave London immediately after the coronation, regardless of weather.

Five thousand persons saw the fliers take off in New York. The big plane, formerly used by Harold S. Vanderbilt as an "air yacht," used only 2,000 feet of the 3,200-foot runway. The fliers were dressed in ordinary business suits, and took with them only a few chicken sandwiches, coffee, some tomato

DIX, MOVIE STAR, FACES CHARGES OF INTOXICATION

HOLLYWOOD, May 10 — (UP) — Police said Richard Dix, veteran movie star, was arrested on a charge of drunkenness early today after offering to fight two policemen.

Officers William Crowder and C. T. Kemp reported that the actor was sitting in his parked automobile in an allegedly intoxicated condition.

Dix jumped out, tore off his coat, and offered to fight, they said.

He was persuaded to yield without a battle and was taken to the Hollywood sub-station and placed in a cell. Police said he would be removed to the main jail later for appearance in municipal court on a charge of violating the city's drunk ordinance.

Dix gave his age as 43, said he was born in Minnesota and had been in Hollywood 20 years.

"I had a few drinks," officers quoted him as saying, "but not enough to be arrested."

Millions Throng London To Witness Historical Ceremony Wednesday

BUS STRIKE PREVAILS

Gerard, Pershing to Don Knee Pants For Fete

LONDON, May 10 — (UP) — King George and Queen Elizabeth paid a surprise visit to Westminster Abbey today for the full dress rehearsal of Wednesday's coronation, and were almost mobbed by a cheering throng outside the abbey.

LONDON, May 10 — (UP) — Coronation week opened today with showers and a bus strike and a determination of millions of people to celebrate fittingly, come what might, the biggest set event on the British calendar.

Representatives of an empire that covers one-fourth the world, envoys from 53 world nations, tourists from nearly as many and the visitors from the British provinces joined Londoners in defying the weather to do its worst, and lending their own color to an occasion which makes plain as nothing else does that kings may come and go, but the kingdom goes on forever.

Climax Wednesday Celebrations will reach their climax Wednesday when King George VI is crowned at Westminster Abbey, along with his consort Queen Elizabeth.

But today the empire capital had been turned over to the celebrants and there was little to be seen of the city's normal bustling attention to business. Princes and Princesses, Indian potentates, women who rode about the streets in gorgeous limousines with frosted windows so that they might not be disgraced by having ordinary people see them; soldiers from dominions, colonies, protectorates; African chiefs, some in flowing gaily colored robes, one in European

ALARM CLOCK DEVICE HELPS COLLEGE SENIOR

NEW YORK, May 10 — (UP) — An alarm clock was just like a brother to Richard F. Hess, 21-year-old senior in Columbia college. It went off and he went on sleeping.

It is a complicated string contraption, which, when attached to his clock, turns on the radio and dumps a glass of cold water in his face when the alarm goes off.

Sheriff Asks Countians to Report Roving Bands

Theft of between $20 and $30 in cash from Mrs. Anna J. McLaughlin, 89, of Pherson, by two gypsy women Sunday at 1 p. m. was cleared several hours later by Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputy Sheriff Marshall Spangler. They made no arrests.

Mrs. McLaughlin, who lives alone, told authorities two gypsy women took a little bag containing the money and a certificate of deposit for $190 she had concealed in her clothing. The certificate was on the Farmer's National bank of Williamsport. Sheriff Radcliff said the women robbed Mrs. McLaughlin while attempting to "heal" her.

Gypsy Camp Visited Radcliff and Spangler checked highways throughout the county during the afternoon to trace a Ford car used in the robbery. They learned of a gypsy camp on Route 40 near West Jefferson.

With Gorman Clark, sheriff of Madison county, they went to the camp and found approximately 100 gypsies camped there. Sheriff Radcliff said he was unable to make any identifications, but he learned many of the gypsies had left the camp before he arrived.

"I just picked out a gypsy woman, and told her she would have to return to Circleville for robbery," the sheriff said. "The captain of the camp and a group of men asked me about the robbery and said they would settle. In a few minutes they gave me $25." It is believed the certificate of deposit was destroyed.

ORIGIN OF FIRE SOUGHT IN PROBE CAUSING BLAST

Commander Rosendahl To Be First to Testify After Tragic Explosion

SURVIVORS TO TALK, TOO

Captain Preuss, in Hospital, May Give Deposition

LAKEHURST, N. J., May 10—(UP)—The United States government opens a public inquiry today into the tragic details of the German dirigible Hindenburg disaster. The mysterious origin of fire in the hydrogen dirigible gas bags was the chief objective sought by a three-man Department of Commerce board of inquiry, by Chairman South Trimble, Jr., to meet at 10 a. m. in the Lakehurst naval air station hangar.

A naval board of investigation, headed by Capt. Gordon W. Haines, previously had planned to open a similar inquiry at the air station at the same hour but indefinitely postponed its hearings so that there would be no conflict.

Government experts said that in many respects the commerce department inquiry would be unprecedented and that they believed it would produce information of tremendous value to the future of lighter-than-air craft.

History Made
Never before, one commerce board member pointed out, has a comparable accident occurred under circumstances so favorable to expert study. The fact that the Hindenburg burst into flames while almost at the mooring mast, while the world's dirigible experts were aboard or watching from the ground and while motion picture and still photographers had their cameras trained on her, gave the disaster the flavor of a fatal laboratory experiment.

"Preparations to study an airship crash couldn't have been much more complete if it had been expected," the expert said. "Full use will be made of the movies and photographs to supplement, confirm or discount the testimony of the expert eye-witnesses."

Col. Harold Hartney, technical adviser to the commerce board, said that in addition to seeking to fix responsibility for the disaster, the board's main objective would be to produce information that would permit avoidance of such accidents in the future.

The fact that Capt. Ernst Lehmann, commander of the Hindenburg during her 1936 season, was among the 35 persons killed by fire and explosion while the dirigible crumpled to the airfield Thursday evening, was a serious blow to the investigations.

In addition, the experts were distressed to discover that the first burst of flame from near the tail of the big ship was not caught clearly in the motion pictures, although some of the still pictures showed the blaze just as it began licking through the fabric. Their study of the motion pictures showed that the first clear view of the blazing ship was when an explosion spurted flame high into the air from the entire aft half of the Hindenburg and the tail already was sinking rapidly to the ground.

Survivors Called
Survivors from the crew of the dirigible were scheduled to be the most important eye witnesses, while Dr. Hugo Eckener, recognized as the world's foremost authority, probably will testify later. Heading an official German commission, he and his colleagues are now en route to the United States and will arrive at the end of the week. With them is Captain Lehmann's widow. The wreckage of the Hindenburg was being guarded carefully for the commission's inspection.

Commander Charles E. Rosendahl and Lt. Commander Jesse L. Kenworthy, first and second in command of the Lakehurst station, authorities on dirigibles, and witnesses of the tragedy, were expected to provide important testimony. Captain Max Preuss, who was in command of the Hindenburg, may be able to testify by deposition. He still is in a serious condition from his burns.

Rosendahl will be today's first witness.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Throbbing with an intense drama that makes it stand out far above preceding aviation films, RKO Radio's "The Woman I Love" proved itself one of the really memorable pictures of the season with its opening yesterday at the Cliftona Theatre.

For perhaps the first time on the screen, the personal side of war-time flyers' lives has been emphasized instead of their spectacular feats in the air. While by no means devoid of exciting aerial scenes, the chief interest of the picture centers on the human equation of a beautiful woman, married to one flyer, who finds herself falling in love with another—a young observer who, by the ironies of fate, proves to be her husband's best friend and inseparable companion at the front.

Alva Shasteen Has Sprained Wrist After Incident

Charles Richardson, 34, brick mason employed at the school house addition, narrowly escaped serious injury and possible death, Saturday night, when he attempted to jump through an open window at the city building.

Richardson, who gave his address as Chicago, was arrested for drunkenness by Patrolman Alva Shasteen. As Richardson was being taken from the police department to the basement stairway he noticed an open window and dove through it. Shasteen caught him by the heels and held him until James McLaughlin and James Ryan could assist him in pulling the man back through the window. Shasteen suffered a sprained wrist.

Had Richardson fallen through the window he would have dropped about 10 feet into the pit along the north side of the city building.

Officer Shasteen said Richardson attempted to get away from him while he was taking him to the city jail.

Police reported J. E. Hickey, Route 1, and Orrie LeMaster, 34, Darbyville, posted $5 bonds each on intoxication charges to report in police court Monday night. FARM NEWS
Brief Items of Interest to Pickaway Farmers
More lime means larger and better yields of Ohio farm crops.
Garden club members and others interested in scenic beauties will hold a State Park tour, Wednesday, May 26. This year a visit will be made to Hocking county and Rock House, Old Man's Cave, and Ash Cave will be main points of interest.

Overgrazing Ohio pasture fields results in the replacement of desirable grasses with poorer species and with weeds and briars. Bare spots on the slopes also may encourage the formation of gullies and start serious erosion problems.
Government observers of business conditions predict a continued favorable demand for farm products as a result of encouraging signs of future business activity and consequent ability of city workers to purchase adequate amounts of food.

FOOD PROBLEM AT CORONATION TO TAX LONDON

Caterers Face Busy Day As Crowds Enter the Stands at 7 a. m.

CHILDREN TO GET MILK

All-Night Task Confronted by Restaurant Men

LONDON, May 10 (UP)—London caterers are faced with the task of feeding the 1,000,000 spectators who will stand along the route of the coronation procession Wednesday. Further preparations must be made for those who will occupy government stands, witness the Coronation in Westminster Abbey, or occupy seats in homes and office buildings.

In that ticket holders must be at their seats not later than 7 a. m. and in some instances 2 hours earlier, it will be necessary to make provisions for supplying them with breakfast. Those not fortunate enough to hold tickets will be standing along the route all night and will create a constant demand for food.

To meet the demand, numerous preparations have been made by all branches of the catering trade. Hyde Park and Green Park, both on the Coronation route, will remain open all night before the Coronation and refreshment buffets and marquees will give continuous service.

Children to Get Milk
Canteens serving milk and hot soup also will be erected in Hyde Park by the Milk Marketing Board. The Board will supply each of the 140,000 children from the London schools with a carton containing one-third of a quart of milk free of charge. This is the amount each child is entitled to have for a half-penny every morning at school.

The 12 marquees in the parks will be open every night until May 20 from 6 p. m. until midnight, when the parks close. This will be for the benefit of those who come to London to see the flood lighting. These arrangements are intended to provide for the million without seats.

More than 200,000 sandwiches as well as cakes and pastries in large quantities are included in the provision for the 85,000 persons who will occupy the government stands. The buffets where these will be served will have a covering in case of rain or sunshine. In addition, boys in uniform will go through the stands with cigarettes, candy and other light refreshments.

Nobility to Be Served
Peers and peeresses who attend the ceremony in Westminster Abbey will be supplied with a fork luncheon at the House of Lords at a cost of $2.65. It will consist of light dishes, sandwiches, cakes and coffee.

Wines, spirits and minerals also will be available "for which cash payment will be taken at time of ordering." The first breakfast will be served for the Officers of State at 5:30 a. m. a buffet will be served in Westminster Hall for those occupying seats in the Old Palace Yard.

One large store is providing breakfast for the occupants of the seats it has let at prices between $9 to $30 ($45 to $150). Hotels and restaurants are making plans to feed the millions who will swarm over other parts of London after the Coronation.

No Tax Bill in Session? Don't be Sure, Says Writer

Stewart Visions Need for More Revenue or Severe Cuts

This is the first of three articles by Charles P. Stewart on the tax situation as seen from Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 10—Few words in our language have more synonyms, in common use, than tax. We dodge using that little word at every chance, and some have been able to obliterate it, not only from their vocabularies, but from their bookkeeping as well. Aversion to the word, and all its connotations, on Capitol Hill, mounts to nausea these days. Anyone who says "tax" up there must accompany it with a smile, and it's wise to dodge, too.

"There will be no tax bill this session," is the theme song of the congressional crooners in both houses. Senators and representatives all know they are whistling in the dark. There will be many revenue measures introduced; amendments levying imposts will be tacked on bills pending. Will any be passed; will one be passed? The answer is, of course, in the future, but what will happen is indicated in the present by the urgent needs, apparent to all.

Private industry has failed to absorb the unemployed at the rate and to the extent hoped for; thousands of the employed have failed to stay absorbed (see John Lewis and all his works), but with the supreme court upholding the Wagner labor relations law, the president, through the national labor board, is pretty well equipped to take care of that phase of the problem. It is certain to be a slow process, and in the meantime federal expenditures for direct and indirect employment will continue.

New Tax Base?

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, majority leader, evidently feels certain of this. Recently, the gentleman from Arkansas announced on the floor of the senate that government spending must be curtailed on an increase in revenues obtained. His voice was dolorous and his air was one of deepest gloom when he hinted of a new tax base. He stopped just short of naming it, and, in spite of questions, it still is anonymous. If Senator Robinson has found an untapped spring of revenue he is entitled to march shoulder to shoulder with Moses on the banks of the stream that gushed from the rock.

Under existing schedules we are taxed if we live and our estates suffer imposts when we die. The federal government has levied on our incomes and 34 of the states have taken their cut from the same source. It seems to be pretty well established that incomes already paying a tax are carrying about all the burden possible, if a further shrinkage in return from that source is to be avoided. That leaves incomes which have hitherto escaped, through exemptions bringing them below the levy limit and those again which no tax is assessed because of their source. Justices of the supreme court are exempt from income tax by constitutional provision; school teachers escape by legislative action. These by no means comprehend the list of privileged incomes and are simply mentioned to show over what a wide area of citizens they extend. An impression is growing in Washington that the smaller and many of the now exempt incomes will be brought within scope of a tax.

Another possible source of income is a general sales tax. Legislation to that end is not spoken of, even in whispers. But, and here is the bug under the chip, it has worked in other countries. Its proponents argue that it is just and as equitable as an excise levy can be. Those opposed assert it will fall heaviest on the "little fellow". There is no denying that, and there is no controverting the fact that the "big fellow," who certainly is carrying a heavy tax burden already, will pay it too. The shadow of a sales tax lies over the seventy-fifth congress, and senators and representatives do not like shadows, particularly those that are darkened by the frowns of "the folk back home." And think, too, of the hearty wails, long and bitter, which will go up from organizations of commercial interests.

Tax Bill Being Hatched?

An Senator Robinson's new tax base is yet to be disclosed. Apparently the only thing against which an assessment, in some form or other has not been levied is the pearly gates and golden pavements.

Under the constitution all levies for revenues must originate in the house of representatives (ways and means committee) and the senate must concur through action of the finance committee of that body of which Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi is chairman.

In the background is the joint committee on internal revenue and taxation. Its personnel consists of members of the ways and means and the senate finance committees. Chairman Robert Doughton of the former and Senator Harrison naturally included. Besides these there are several unofficial members, employed because of their knowledge of tax problems. The joint committee functions as a bill drafting and advisory body.

That briefly is the outline of the machine which grinds out the dollars which Uncle Sam spends, here, there and the other place.

Neither Representative Doughton nor Senator Harrison cares to discuss the probability of new and heavier taxes; as a matter of cold fact they had rather not even men-taxes, levies, imposts, excises and duties—just to name a few of the official synonyms for the hated word—are below the expectations of the president, who has said he hoped for a total of nearly six billions.

The executive side of the picture is even gloomier. President Roosevelt has demanded cuts in the personnel of bureaus and departments, but no one in his right mind can conceive of enough blue slips being handed out to bring the salary saving item to any considerable figure. If an economy, if that is the proper word, is effected by that means, unemployment will mount to a point where — well, it's pretty bad right this minute. Between 800 and 900 are going to be dropped by the AA and are the telephone bells of senators and representatives jangling! A scurry is on to find them nooks in this vast federal factory, gaited not so much to the tempo of production as to the luxury of patronage.

All Comes to This

So it boils down to this: Senator Robinson says federal spending must be cut or an increase in revenues achieved.

For reasons of economy the president orders curtailment in the number of government employees.

The citizen in the street bids his dollar a fond adieu, for he feels it's going to take another wallop, and probably come back to father, shrunken to a two-bit piece.

ILL-FATED ZEPPELINS

APPALLING loss of life in the latest zeppelin disaster, the explosion of the Hindenburg, may sound the death knell of this form of air transportation. Abandoned by the United States Navy after three air catastrophes, the zeppelin in late years has been promoted chiefly by Germany's Dr. Hugo Eckener, who designed the Hindenburg but was not permitted to command her because Hitler felt he was insulted or something when the ship was named Hindenburg instead of Hitler.

Plans for transatlantic heavier-than-air service appear to be still in the formative stage. Colonel Lindbergh has made several surveys in Ireland for a base for such service, but it is believed in aeronautical circles that the risk would be as great as that entailed in the Hindenburg venture.

The history of sausage aircraft has been particularly unfortunate. Introduced during the world war, when they were used for killing women and children behind the battle lines and made several raids on London, this form of aircraft has taken a horrible toll of life in the years that have elapsed since then. The fate of the Macon and the Shenandoah, of the U. S. Navy, are still fresh in memory.

BORAH'S NEW PARTY

THE report that Senator Borah and Senator Nye are contemplating the formation of a new political party will be accepted without a great deal of hesitation, at least by those who are familiar with the career and the personality of Senator Borah.

The spirit of the senator from Idaho is naturally restive and, strangely enough, does not grow serene or complacent with the years. Naturally, he is a Republican, but in the course of time wanders far and wide over the range. He is the head of his own little political party, a conservative, a liberal and at times hovers on the borderline of Democracy.

The senator has an infinite capacity for political loyalties, so long as the element of conventionalism is not too heavily involved, and it is altogether possible that he can assume a position of leadership in an entirely new party, while at the same time, of course, remaining a Republican, a progressive, a conservative and even a reactionary.

BETTER THAN WAR

COOPERATION of the Navy Department and American scientists in the erection of the new 200-inch telescope near Pasadena suggests the benefits that will come when technical skill and knowledge are directed exclusively toward peaceful instead of militant ends.

It is indeed a sad commentary on modern civilization that engineering and scientific knowledge should be so largely devoted to perfection of the tools of war when so many opportunities exist for the advancement

PAGES from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter:

A real morning of Spring called, so up and about at an unusually early hour and on streets of the village did find many of happy mood, prominent among them being Bobbie Root. Not enough folk know Bobbie, for there is a lad who will go places. Only fourteen, yet already using his head. Bobbie is out early every Sunday morning carrying a broom and offering to sweep sidewalks at a price of two to four cents. Boys such as Bobbie should be encouraged.

There go Charlie Gilmore and his dog out for a hike through the fields and here's George Forster enjoying the passing show from a comfortable chair on his front porch. Chatted with Earl Hilyard, he commenting that much still is right with the world.

Four hundred automobiles passing along Court street every hour. Thirty-seven years ago not one family in a hundred owned a horse and buggy, but today three out of four have cars. Two families out of a hundred then had a telephone where there are thirteen now. Fewer than a half million families own electric refrigerators; twenty-two million have radios. How can anyone lack faith in a nation that offers so many adventures and rich rewards.

Learned that the county auditor has complained about the alleged cost of publishing the delinquent tax list. Auditors cypher that printing delinquents may cost them hundreds of votes, whereas if they can play favorites they may be able to go on forever.

More visitors in town Saturday night than have been seen at any time since the Pumpkin Show. And business flourished. If mother ate all the candy bought for her a sick woman she will be all of the week. But then she probably had a lot of help in disposing of it.

Read in a Florida paper that "a city is given class not by the number of its citizens, but the kind and their civic aspirations and achievements." That may be a new idea in the Southland, but in this village we recognized the fact long ago. Bob Malone made an auto trip to South Carolina over the week end and was returning home when he was hailed by a man at the side of the highway. The pedestrian was none other than an educator who will join the high school staff next year, he being very anxious to reach Lancaster and there being no means of transportation, he took to the road and waved his thumb. A "fine chap," says Bob.

What a "bust" the day turned out to be after such a beautiful start. A quiet afternoon at home watching the rain and trying to arouse interest in a treatise entirely too something for my intellect.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

EVERYONE TALKS ECONOMY

WASHINGTON — The situation on the economy issue is like that of the shipwrecked sailor afloat on a raft in the middle of the ocean — water, water, water everywhere, but not a drink to drink.

Everybody in Washington is for economy: the President, Congress, Treasury, Federal Reserve Board, Republicans, everybody. But no one is doing a thing about it — except talk. Appropriation bills continue to click through with regularity, but with inconsequential savings or none at all.

To date the only economizing worthy of the name that has been achieved is the lopping off of a $37,000,000 construction item from the $526,000,000 Navy bill. On the $415,000,000 Army measure the only pruning that Congress seemed to find passable was the excision of $700,000 in pay increases. Next to relief, the expenditures of these two departments are the greatest in the Government.

The failure to do any appreciable budget trimming so far does not mean that an economy program will not be enacted this session. Such action is both possible and likely. But how and where, no one in authority is in a position to say.

ECONOMY CHAOS

This chaotic situation is due to a jumble within the Administration and Congress. The President, torn by conflicting counsel among his advisers, has not made up his mind what to do. And Congress, lacking White House leadership, is in an even worse stew.

On the Senate side there is considerable sentiment and agitation for a flat 10 per cent reduction on all appropriations. On the House side most of the leaders lean to a proposition that would give the President power to impound up to 15 per cent of appropriations after they have been voted.

This neat scheme simply means: "Eat your cake and have it too." The boys would be on record both for voting appropriations and for economy—with the buck passed to the White House to make the actual savings.

INNER CIRCLE TURMOIL

The turmoil in the inner circle is dominated by two schools of thought on the economy question.

One, led by Relief Administrator Hopkins, Secretary Ickes, and Secretary Wallace, is strongly opposed to any drastic curtailment of government expenditures. They contend that slashing the budget is deflationary and in direct contradiction to the fundamental theory of New Deal economics—to redistribute wealth by spending, raising the money through taxation on the profits and dividends accruing from the resulting recovery.

Not reduction of expenditures but increased taxes is the advice of this group.

The second school, comprising Secretary Morgenthau, Reserve Board Chairman Eccles, and RFC boss Jesse Jones, insists that the time has arrived to clamp down on free spending and to balance the budget. It is this group that, indirectly, is fanning the flames of economy clamor on Capitol Hill.

CHAPTER 45

AS THE DOOR closed behind Mrs. Smith, Charles sprang to his feet.

"Lutman, you swine!" he exclaimed furiously. "Where is Jacqueline? If you don't tell me . . ."

Lutman raised a deprecatory hand. "My dear Charles," he said, "surely we've had enough hysteria for one day? Do you treat all your better-class clients as you treated Mrs. Smith?"

Charles ignored the question. "Where's Jacqueline?" he demanded. "What have you done with her? Either you tell me . . ."

"Or you will spring at my throat like a mad tiger and squeeze the truth out of me, eh?" He shook his head. "I seem to remember that you tried that on a previous occasion, but, if my memory isn't at fault, the mad tiger act wasn't a great success. Sit down, Charles, and be reasonable."

The lawyer, however, did not sit down: he remained where he was, facing Lutman threateningly.

"What dirty game have you got on now, Lutman?"

"I suppose you wouldn't believe me if I said I have no game, either dirty or otherwise?"

"No, I shouldn't."

"Or if I told you that I'm just as much in ignorance of Jacqueline's whereabouts as you and her mother are?"

"That's a lie. Don't try the innocent pose, Lutman: it won't wash. And that yarn you spun to Mrs. Smith—that Jacqueline called on you and had tea with you and confided her plans to you—was all lies. Mrs. Smith can believe them if she likes. She's fool enough to believe anything if it happens to suit her convenience, and she's really only too glad to have only herself to think of for a time—but I don't believe them, and I mean to know the truth."

"About Jacqueline's visit to me?"

"Jacqueline didn't visit you. She wouldn't set foot inside your flat."

"But she did, Charles," smiled Lutman. "She called on me of her own free will and we had tea together."

"Does that hurt you, your lover's pride? But there's no need to be jealous; it was all quite innocent and harmless—just a friendly kiss or two . . ."

As Charles drew back his fist, Lutman took a couple of quick steps backward.

"Just a friendly kiss or two," he repeated, "but nothing more. You mustn't be too old-fashioned, Charles. Girls nowadays think nothing of a few kisses. All that 'No, no, a thousand times no' business is hopelessly out of date, and there are mighty few girls in these days who'd rather die than say yes."

"If you don't shut your filthy mouth, Lutman, I'll shut it for you."

The Colonel raised his eyebrows and regarded the other man searchingly.

"I can't make you out lately, Charles," he said. "All this violence—springing at my throat, insulting Mrs. Smith, clenching your fists and glaring and threatening—it's so unlike you. You were always such a perfect little gentleman, so delightfully spineless."

"Never mind me, Lutman. Where's Jacqueline?"

"I suppose we must attribute it to the transforming power of love, eh, Charles? The jellyfish feels the magic touch of the tender passion and promptly develops a backbone and rears itself up and spits fire in defense of its mate. But I'm not in the least scared of a jellyfish, even when it is in love."

The Colonel raised his eyebrows and regarded the other man searchingly.

But I'm not in the least scared of a jellyfish, even when it is in love."

The door was suddenly flung open, and Jim Asson, slamming it behind him, came striding into the room.

"What's the game, Lutman?" he demanded aggressively.

Lutman surveyed him with a look of pained surprise

You know why, don't you? Because just as soon as it becomes a real nuisance to me I can squash it."

"Are you going to tell me where Jacqueline is, Lutman, or are you not?"

"Believe it or not, Charles, the fact remains that I haven't the least idea where she is. Except that she was intending to leave home and look for a more congenial job than being Jim Asson's wife."

"All right," interrupted Charles. "Now listen, Lutman. I'm not bluffing this time. You're quite right when you say that I've altered lately; I have altered. I'm not in the least afraid of you now, or of what you can do. If you feel like smashing me, get on with it and smash me. That threat means nothing to me now."

"There's a song or something, isn't there, Charles, which says 'Ain't love grand?'"

"I just want you to understand, Lutman, that this time I mean what I say, and I'm warning you that unless you tell me what has become of Jacqueline, I'm going straight away to Scotland Yard and put the police on the trail."

The Colonel chuckled. "I shall lose no sleep over that, Charles. They'll probably find her knitting a jumper in some perfectly respectable bed-sitting room in the suburbs."

"We'll hope so, anyway," said Stuckey. "The point is that within an hour from now, unless you call off whatever dirty game you've got on and tell me where I can see Jacqueline, the police will be looking for her. And if anything happens to her—Good Lord, Lutman, if you hurt a hair of her head I'll smash every bone in your rotten carcass!"

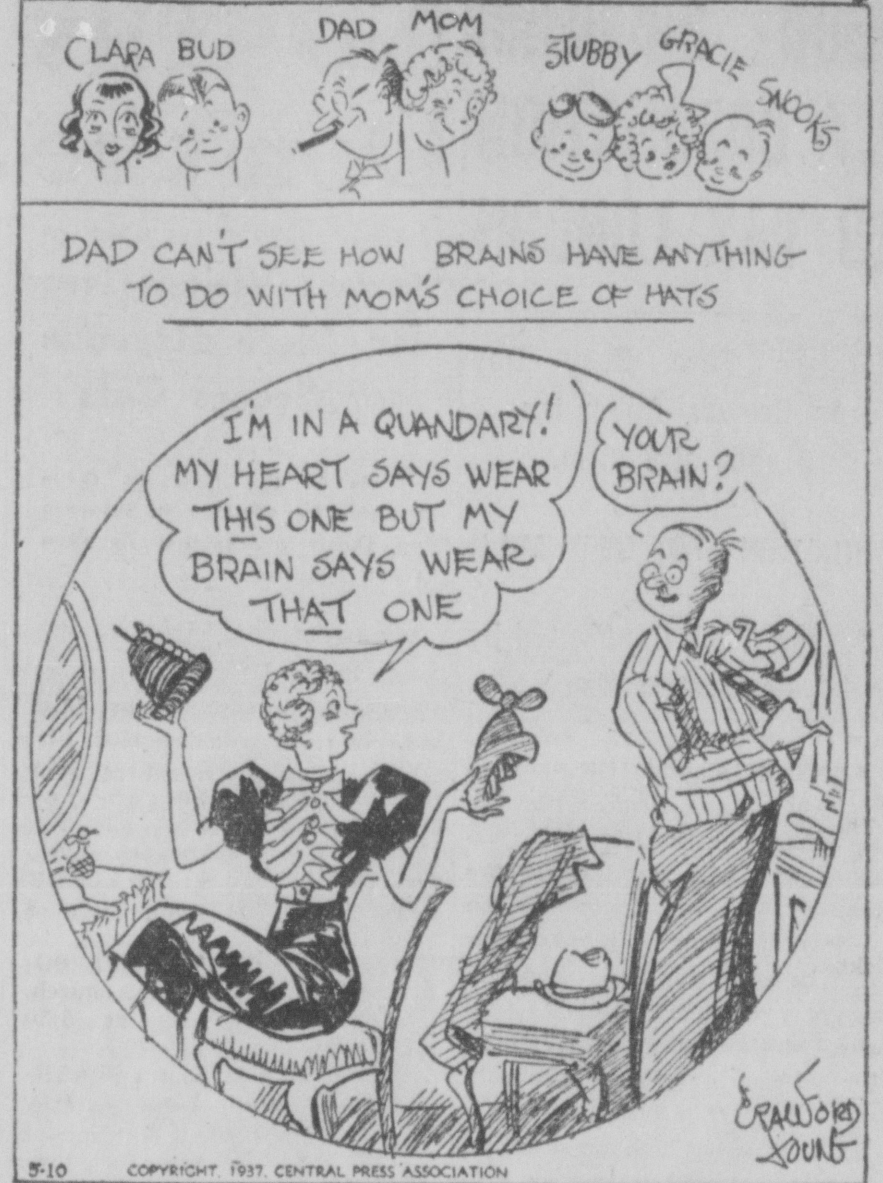

The door was suddenly flung open, and Jim Asson, slamming it behind him, came striding into the room.

"What's the game, Lutman?" he demanded aggressively.

Roughage in Treatment of Constipation

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
We DISCUSSED yesterday some recent research in the subject of constipation, in which different kinds of food products were isolated and studied on patients as to their effect on sluggish bowels. Only one kind of food was given at a time, so that the results were not contaminated by mixed factors.

Today we want to consider the subject of roughage. Roughage is the indigestible part of food which gives the food residue bulk in the large intestine and stimulates the bowel to activity. Any part of the food that does not digest and does not suffer bacterial decomposition, or whose products are unabsorbed, contributes to the residue in the lower bowel. Some of these residues are bland and mechanically uninteresting, while some are believed to act as mechanical irritants and are called roughage.

Of the bland residues, it is surprising to find that eggs, especially raw eggs, milk, cheese, white bread, macaroni, potatoes and branless cereals, furnish a good part. Hurst, in England, was able to recover 5 per cent of the dry substance of meat, eggs and white bread, while he was able to recover 15 to 20 per cent of green vegetables, brown bread, carrots and turnips.

The question of what is roughage is somewhat debatable. Fiber and cellulose are usually considered to be roughage, but cellulose is really as bland as any insoluble substance could be. The foods which furnish roughage residues as distinguished from the bland residues are bran-containing cereals, whole wheat bread, fruits and vegetables, particularly raw fruits, and salads and relishes. The structures that constitute the roughage of vegetable foods are (1) those held together by fibrous cells and the wood and fibers of stems, roots, the ribs of leaves, and the interiors of fruits; (2) those protected by the cutin or cork tissue in the structures of roots, stems, leaves and fruits; (3) seeds. Owing to a mucilaginous layer in the coats, some hard seeds become soft in the digestive canal or on cooking.

The constipated person requires more than the normal amount of roughage for distention. This is because he destroys more roughage than the normal person. Cowgill and Anderson estimate that the average person requires 50 parts of roughage, while the constipated individual requires, comparatively, 90 parts of roughage per pound of body weight. There is a type of constipation, however, in which the digestive canal is so sensitive that the patient cannot take roughage in any form.

Informal Tea Arranged By Mrs. George Crites

Members of Former

Mrs. George Crites entertained at an informal tea, Saturday afternoon, at her home in S. Court street, for the pleasure of her sister, Mrs. Freda Mitchell, of Iron-ton, formerly of Circleville.

A pleasant afternoon of remi-niscing and visiting was brought to a close by a half hour around the tea table.

The guest list included members of a club of which Mrs. Mitchell was member, and a few other friends.

Those invited were Mrs. George Fickhardt, Mrs. Howard Orr, Mrs. Leland Pontius, Mrs. Harry Heff-ner, Mrs. Clark Will, Mrs. Adrian Yates, Mrs. H. D. POMPOON CHALLENGER

No Alibis Offered After Race's Conclusion

By HENRY McEMORE
LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 10 — (UP) — Unless something drastic happens to him between now and next Saturday Man O' War's snugly built little brown colt, War Admiral, will be a double-dipped chick to follow his smashing victory in the Kentucky derby with a triumph in the Preakness at Baltimore.

Rated off his work in the blue grass classic here two days ago, there isn't a three-year-old in the country who can give him much more than a brisk exercise.

True, Jerry Loucheim's handsome Pompoon finished but a length behind the Admiral in the derby, and was running strongly at the end. But that doesn't mean much, because only once during the mile and a quarter journey—and then for only an eighth of a mile—did War Admiral really shoot the works and run for all he had. That was when Pompoon, out to prove that he wasn't just a sprinter, challenged near the head of the stretch.

Let Loose Once

In what seemed to be no more than one bound War Admiral, let loose at last by Charley Kurtzinger, picked up two and a half lengths and was running away from his only rival.

Despite the ease with which he won, War Admiral ran the second fastest derby in the long history of the race. He negotiated the distance in 2:03 1-5 and the only better time is the record 2:01 4-5 made by Twenty Grand in 1931. It is interesting to note that Charley Kurtzinger, a Louisville boy whose birthplace was a stone's throw from Churchill Downs rode both the fastest winners.

No one will ever give a horse a better ride than the "Flying Dutchman" did Man O' War's boy on Saturday. His judgment of pace was magnificent. On top from the start, he kept his charge there, but never pushed him to the point that he was not ready to withstand any and all challenges.

Might Have Been Farce

It was a good thing that Pompoon was in the race. Otherwise the race would have been a farce, for the Loucheim hope was the only horse in the field with enough class to keep within hailing distance of the smooth-striding Admiral.

THE DERBY WINNER

WAR ADMIRAL, with Jockey Charley Kurtzinger up, is shown at historic Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., after winning the sixty-third running of the Kentucky Derby. Seventy-five thousand persons witnessed the running of the turf classic under perfect weather conditions.

Strong Field Assured For Beulah Inaugural

COLUMBUS, May 10—Stoutest field that ever has faced the barrier in an inaugural handicap at Beulah Park is promised for the renewal of the event which will feature the card of eight races on opening day, Saturday, May 15.

Already named for the mile race is a $1,200 purse is the good filly, Miss Ginbar, which won 11 times last year and has scored on four occasions this season.

Her most recent conquest was in the Dallas handicap at Arlington Downs. She is trained by Ernie Eslick for Mrs. E. N. Thompson.

W. C. Weant, veteran Kentucky horseman has named two horses already from the string of 23 he will race at Beulah Park. They are Miss Premier and the veteran stake horse, Prince Fox.

Another horse that is a handicap winner of the year in Texas and a nominee for the Beulah Park inaugural, is Ashen, owned and trained by C. A. Calhoun.

Nominations for Beulah Park's opening day feature will not close until Thursday, May 13. Prospect is that Racing Secretary Hileman will assign weights to a limit field for the event.

Work is progressing nicely on the $100,000 program of improvements at Beulah Park and all will be well in hand by opening afternoon, May 15.

YESTERDAY'S HERO: Willis Hudlin, second string pitcher of the Cleveland Indians, who, when hauled into the breach created by Mel Harder's illness, turned in a four-hit performance to place his team in a tie for the league lead.

TWO SAUNDERS YOUTHS

MAY EMULATE OWENS

COLUMBUS, May 10—(UP)—

A pair of dusky youngsters that aspire to climb to fame through the same medium as Jesse Owens, the individual hero of the 1936 Olympics, today stood apart from the maze of scholastic athletes who have taken part in a crowded invitational relay program this Spring.

The youngsters were John and Joe Saunders of Glendale high in suburban Cincinnati. These Negro lads stole the week-end spotlight from other scholastic competitors when they teamed to score 41 points in the Miami University relay at Oxford.

About This And That In Many Sports

Eyes of Racing Fans Turn Toward Beulah

The Derby over, attention of Circleville horsefolks turns toward Beulah Park and its racing course, grandstand and other accommodations--Several from the city attended the Park's open house, Sunday, with refreshments, free lunch and an inspection tour held--The meet starts next Saturday--The meet starts next Saturday, but its jockey almost had to use a flashlight to find the way home--The Scott Carpenter horse that has done quite well in many races, ran into tough luck (and the dust of all the other horses) while finishing last--The event followed the big Derby--In case you didn't already know War Admiral won the race, Pompoon was second, and Reaping Reward third--It was a nice race and a very excellent day, so reports have it--Ike Collins' Bernard F was eighteenth, but eating dirt from the heels of 17 horses wasn't so bad as the great Mr. Bradley's Billionaire had to do; he was last.

Doc Phillips, semifinalist in the Pickaway Country Club's golf tourney two years ago, is a real enthusiast, especially when his irons are working well--The other day he was having a tough time (Harold Grant was beating him, and that rather puts the tooth expert out of sorts)--Phillips dubbed and dubbed, and then dubbed some more, until his caddy said: "I wouldn't let that bother you, you'll get onto it one of these days"--Phil almost hit the ceiling--Cleveland called a couple of thought-to-be has-beens out of the mothball bags during the week-end to whip the Yankees and Boston Sox--Ivy Paul Andrews, cast-off by Boston, New York and St. Louis, shutout the Yanks in Saturday's fray--Sunday, Willis Hudlin, who didn't win a game until the last start of the 1936 season, gave the Sox four hits to win 4-1--The Indians are tied for the top of the loop despite an epidemic of bad baserunning--What about the Redlegs?--When Greece Kampouris can hit three home runs in one game, something is wrong--Circleville high school harriers are scheduled for a journey to Washington C. H. Tuesday, and they might win, providing all the running and jumping members of the band go along--Rich Weldon, we understand, is champion pugilist of Mr. Zaenglein's organization--Ask the boy from Upper Arlington--Someone ought to do something about Frank L. Marion's 117 score in the headpin tourney--Until he toppled the score there was a lot of interest in the meet--Since 117 is higher than the score that won several Columbus tourneys, other klegers are not willing to spend their cash--There will be handsome prizes for second and third places, too, bowlers, so why not get busy?--

CONTRACT BRIDGE

MAKE THEM CONFESS
DUPLICATE players get one kick out of the game which never is received by rubber players. They have the opportunity of seeing results obtained at other tables and sometimes can hardly believe their own eyes as they note the incredible contracts that are made or defeated. It always is fun then to spread the hand and get the culprits to explain just what chain of results led to the peculiar scores.

Three-No Trumps by South was the final contract here at all tables in a duplicate tournament. At all but two tables, South made 4-No Trumps, getting three tricks in each minor, two in hearts and two in spades. One declarer made only three because, when he led the spade 9, West covered with the K. The declarer ducked this, but on the next spade round he took the Ace, as he could not afford to finesse, which would beat his contract if it failed.

Mrs. Kay Coffin of Indianapolis.

one of the best woman experts in the country, actually managed to defeat the contract, holding it to 2-No Trumps. She had listened to the bidding, which was 1-Diamond by South, 1-Spade by North and 3-No Trumps by South. She reasoned that South must have exactly two little spades; if only a singleton, he would not have jumped into 3-No Trumps; if as many as three, or two to the Q or Ace, he would have forced in some way to see whether North wanted to rebid his spades. So she eschewed her natural lead of hearts and offered the spade K. The declarer, reckoning from this that the spades were all bunched at his left, let it go and tried the spade finesse on the second round. He now had no way to take more than eight tricks and was therefore down one.

SIX MEMBERS INITIATED

Interesting Entertainment Provided Visitors

More than 300 Eagles took part in the jubilee celebration of the Circleville Lodge, No. 685, and the twelfth district meeting and initiation held Sunday afternoon and evening. Delegations were present from Springfield, London, Hillsboro, Greenfield, Columbus and Washington C. H.

Both the district meeting and an entertainment, open to the public were held in Memorial hall Circleville Aerie officers opened the lodge for the district meeting, and the degree team of London Aerie was in charge of the initiation. Six candidates were initiated.

Rain Reduces Crowd

Due to the steady downpour of rain during the afternoon, a small crowd attended the open meeting that followed the district session. James H. Kellner, Columbus, state president of the lodge, praised the work of the local lodge in clearing its debts, increasing the membership and improving the lodge home.

Observance of Mother's Day, he explained, originated in the Eagles lodge in 1904, and through the fraternity, the celebration has gained prominence. In addition, the lodge has boosted legislation for the benefit of mothers and families, including the workmen's compensation, old-age pensions, and mother's pensions.

Mortgage Destroyed

A $2,000 mortgage, the last indebtedness of the lodge, was burned at the public meeting. George Fitzpatrick, treasurer of the lodge, was in charge of the ceremony, said the mortgage was written for $10,000 on July 2, 1928. He announced since payment of the mortgage the lodge has a balance of approximately $1,500. The lodge was instituted in 1904.

Music for the public meeting was furnished by Hilaire Haacker, city, and Frankie Winsell, Chillicothe, accordionists; Harvey Morrison, Clarksville, who features a one man band including piano, harmonica, drum and vocal music and a quartet consisting of Pryor Timmons, Clarksville; Coyt Clarey, Atlanta; Clarence Radcliffe, Williamsport, and Elzie Radcliffe, Columbus. Willis Clarey, Atlanta, was accompanist. Tap dancing numbers were given by Virginia Saul, Chillicothe. Elzie Radcliffe and Coyt Clarey sang solos.

Mayor Welcomes Visitors

Mayor W. J. Graham, chairman of the program committee, presented the address of welcome and introduced state and district officers including Emmett Passmore, Washington C. H. chairman of the district; C. A. Roberts, Springfield, district director; and Charles Snyder, Columbus, state treasurer of the lodge.

Following the public meeting members of the lodge were served a dinner in the home.

FOUR BIDS REJECTED

Four bids submitted to J. F. Mavis, service director, for street oil and patching materials were rejected Saturday because labor and materials were not listed separately. New bids will be asked. R. P. Enderlin was awarded the contract to furnish 400 feet of eight-inch vitrified sewer pipe.

dress but with a big feather fly swatter; the tourists and visitors and ordinary Londoners filled the streets which were decorated for miles with flags, streamers and loyal mottoes.

The official program of a celebration that really will continue for weeks opens tonight with a state banquet at Buckingham palace for 450 guests of the king and queen. It will be a full dress affair. James W. Gerard and Gen. John J. Pershing, of the American delegation, may wear, respectively, their new knee pants and General Grant uniform.

But cafes, public houses, theatres, movies and the streets themselves provided the color for most of the visitors.

There were few, despite the dismal weather and the dislocation of traffic caused by the bus strike, who stopped to complain or to be depressed by recollection that King George is being crowned only because King Edward VIII, the one time "prince charming," left his throne and his people for love of a foreign born woman.

Farther Than Miles

Edward, with Mrs. Wallis Simpson, seemed much farther away than the mere miles between London and the Chateau De Candé in France.

The coronation is a symbol which means that England, Great Britain and the empire go on. King George is the 40th sovereign of England—omitting the two Cromwells—and behind those 40 were 19 Saxon kings.

This Wednesday was to have been the coronation day of Edward VIII. His brother George stepped in at the moment Edward, as Duke of Windsor, stepped out.

Since the last coronation in 1911, that of George V, father of the monarch to be crowned Wednesday, there have been events that have shaken the world. In Europe, the monarchies of Russia, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Turkey, Spain, Montenegro have passed. An age of dictators began. Four years of world war were succeeded by a troubled peace to safeguard which Great Britain is spending $7,500,000,000 for armaments.

This coronation finds the empire a commonwealth of nations, with the Irish Free State linked to the mother country only by the most tenuous of ties and the dominions generally sovereign states, with India starting on the path to-

But there was little time today for such thoughts of these. juice and a collapsible rubber boat given them by Al Williams, Navy speed flier.

The 10-passenger plane had been remodeled so that all available space could be used for fuel. Merrill took 1,200 gallons and 60 gallons of oil. He estimated that this gave him a flying range of 4,500 miles, 1,000 miles more than he needs.

The ship is equipped with constant speed propellers, an automatic pilot, a gyro-compass and a two-way radio, which Merrill used to transmit hourly reports. He is regularly employed by Eastern Air lines in the United States on the New York-Miami run, and Lambie has been his co-pilot. Lambie said the London flight was "just a break in the monotony of the run."

Merrill was to have carried news-reel pictures of the dirigible Hindenburg disaster, but at the last minute he was informed that "London has banned the films because it doesn't want a shadow cast over the coronation ceremonies." However, he did carry "still" pictures of the tragedy.

The pilot, who made the two-way ocean flight last year with Harry Richman, described this trip as the "American goodwill coronation flight." He indicated his firm belief that he would be back in New York on schedule.

Sheriff Asks Courtians to Report Roving Bands

Theft of between $20 and $30 in cash from Mrs. Anna J. McLaughlin, 89, of Pherson, by two gypsy women Sunday at 1 p. m. was cleared several hours later by Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputy Sheriff Marshall Spangler. They made no arrests.

Mrs. McLaughlin, who lives alone, told authorities two gypsy women took a little bag containing the money and a certificate of deposit for $190 she had concealed in her clothing. The certificate was on the Farmer's National bank of Williamsport. Sheriff Radcliff said the women robbed Mrs. McLaughlin while attempting to "heal" her.

Gypsy Camp Visited
Radcliff and Spangler checked highways throughout the county during the afternoon to trace a Ford car used in the robbery. They learned of a gypsy camp on Route 40 near West Jefferson.

With Gorman Clark, sheriff of Madison county, they went to the camp and found approximately 100 gypsies camped there. Sheriff Radcliff said he was unable to make any identifications, but he learned many of the gypsies had left the camp before he arrived.

"I just picked out a gypsy woman, and told her she would have to return to Circleville for robbery," the sheriff said. "The captain of the camp and a group of men asked me about the robbery and said they would settle. In a few minutes they gave me $25." It is believed the certificate of deposit was destroyed.

ALARM CLOCK DEVICE HELPS COLLEGE SENIOR

NEW YORK, May 10. — (UP) — An alarm clock was just like a brother to Richard F. Hess, 21-year-old senior in Columbia college. It went off and he went on sleeping.

After several warnings from unsympathetic professors, Hess rigged himself up a fool-proof alarm system which stirs him out of bed on time all the time. It is a complicated string contraption, which, when attached to his clock, turns on the radio and dumps a glass of cold water in his face when the alarm goes off.

Gerard, Pershing to Don Knee Pants For Fete

LONDON, May 10. — (UP) — King George and Queen Elizabeth paid a surprise visit to Westminster Abbey today for the full dress rehearsal of Wednesday's coronation, and were almost mobbed by a cheering throng outside the abbey.

LONDON, May 10. — (UP) — Coronation week opened today with showers and a bus strike and a determination of millions of people to celebrate fittingly, come what might, the biggest set event on the British calendar.

Representatives of an empire that covers one-fourth the world, envoys from 53 foreign nations, tourists from nearly as many and the visitors from the British provinces joined Londoners in defying the weather to do its worst, and lending their own color to an occasion which makes plain as nothing else does that kings may come and go, but the kingdom goes on forever.

Climax Wednesday

Celebrations will reach their climax Wednesday when King George VI is crowned at Westminster Abbey, along with his consort Queen Elizabeth.

But today the empire capital had been turned over to the celebrants and there was little to be seen of the city's normal bustling attention to business. Princes and Princesses, Indian potentates, women who rode about the streets in gorgeous limousines with frosted windows so that they might not be disgraced by having ordinary people see them; soldiers from dominions, colonies, protectorates; African chiefs, some in flowing gaily colored robes, some in European

News Pictures of Dirigible Disaster Are Banned

LONDON, May 10. — (UP) — Dick Merrill, completing a successful transatlantic flight from New York to England, landed at 12:10 p. m. EST at Northweald, Royal Air Force airfield in Essex.

The air ministry, which made the announcement, said Merrill set off immediately for Croydon, his ultimate objective.

Northweald airfield is about 20 miles northeast of London.

Merrill and John S. Lambie, his co-pilot, took off from Floyd Bennett field, New York City, at 3:30 p. m. (EST) yesterday, promising their friends that they would return on Thursday with the first pictures of the coronation of King George VI.

The twin-motored Lockheed-Electra, capable of top speed of 210 miles an hour, followed the great circle route.

Delay Not Explained

Merrill had estimated that the eastbound flight would take about 18 hours, which should have brought him to Croydon airfield soon after 9:30 a. m. EST. Cause for his delay was not given.

The flight, backed by Ben Smith and Mike Bergen, Wall Street operators, is for the sole purpose of flying coronation pictures to New York. Merrill's contract calls for him to leave London immediately after the coronation, regardless of weather.

Five thousand persons saw the fliers take off in New York. The big plane, formerly used by Harold S. Vanderbilt as an "air yacht," used only 2,000 feet of the 3,200-foot runway. The fliers were dressed in ordinary business suits, and took with them only a few chicken sandwiches, coffee, some tomato (Continued on Page Eight)

DIX, MOVIE STAR, FACES CHARGES OF INTOXICATION

HOLLYWOOD, May 10. — (UP) — Police said Richard Dix, veteran movie star, was arrested on a charge of drunkenness early today after offering to fight two policemen.

Officers William Crowder and C. T. Kemp reported that the actor was sitting in his parked automobile in an allegedly intoxicated condition.

Dix jumped out, tore off his coat, and offered to fight, they said. He was persuaded to yield without a battle and was taken to the Hollywood sub-station and placed in a cell. Police said he would be removed to the main jail later for appearance in municipal court on a charge of violating the city's drunk ordinance.

Dix gave his age as 43, said he was born in Minnesota and had been in Hollywood 20 years.

"I had a few drinks," officers quoted him as saying, "but not enough to be arrested."

GOVERNMENT OPENS PUBLIC INQUIRY IN HINDENBURG DISASTER MONDAY

ORIGIN OF FIRE SOUGHT IN PROBE CAUSING BLAST

Commander Rosendahl To Be First to Testify After Tragic Explosion

SURVIVORS TO TALK, TOO

Captain Preuss, in Hospital, May Give Deposition

LAKEHURST, N. J., May 10.—(UP)—The United States government opens a public inquiry today into the tragic details of the German dirigible Hindenburg disaster.

The mysterious origin of fire in the hydrogen dirigible gas bags was the chief objective sought by a three-man Department of Commerce board of inquiry, by Chairman South Trimble, Jr., to meet at 10 a. m. in the Lakehurst naval air station hangar.

A naval board of investigation, headed by Capt. Gordon W. Haines, previously had planned to open a similar inquiry at the air station at the same hour but indefinitely postponed its hearings so that there would be no conflict.

Government experts said that in many respects the commerce department inquiry would be unprecedented and that they believed it would produce information of tremendous value to the future of lighter-than-air craft.

History Made

Never before, one commerce board member pointed out, has a comparable accident occurred under circumstances so favorable to expert study. The fact that the Hindenburg burst into flames while almost at the mooring mast, while the world's dirigible experts were aboard or watching from the ground and while motion picture and still photographers had their cameras trained on her, gave the disaster the flavor of a fatal laboratory experiment.

"Preparations to study an airship crash couldn't have been much more complete if it had been expected," the expert said. "Full use will be made of the movies and photographs to supplement, confirm or discount the testimony of the expert eye-witnesses."

Col. Harold Hartney, technical adviser to the commerce board, said that in addition to seeking to fix responsibility for the disaster, the board's main objective would be to produce information that would permit avoidance of such accidents in the future.

The fact that Capt. Ernst Lehmann, commander of the Hindenburg during her 1936 season, was among the 35 persons killed by fire and explosion while the dirigible crumpled to the airfield Thursday evening, was a serious blow to the investigations.

In addition, the experts were distressed to discover that the first burst of flame from near the tail of the big ship was not caught clearly in the motion pictures, although some of the still pictures showed the blaze just as it began licking through the fabric. Their study of the motion pictures showed that the first clear view of the blazing ship was when an explosion spurted flame high into the air from the entire aft half of the Hindenburg and the tail already was sinking rapidly to the ground.

Survivors Called

Survivors from the crew of the dirigible were scheduled to be the most important early witnesses, while Dr. Hugo Eckener, recognized as the world's foremost authority, probably will testify later.

Heading an official German commission, he and his colleagues are now en route to the United States and will arrive at the end of the week. With them is Captain Lehmann's widow. The wreckage of the Hindenburg was being guarded carefully for the commission's inspection.

Commander Charles E. Rosendahl and Lt. Commander Jesse L. Kenworthy, first and second in command of the Lakehurst station, authorities on dirigibles, and witnesses of the tragedy, were expected to provide important testimony. Captain Max Preuss, who was in command of the Hindenburg, may be able to testify by deposition. He still is in a serious condition from his burns.

Rosendahl will be today's first witness.

Supernatural Supported

We met yesterday, one of our old friends who is a strong believer in the supernatural. Especially does he believe in warnings and tokens which come to us in the form of what in "the old days" they called spirits or spooks. And to prove what he said he told us that he positively knew to his own knowledge, and seeing as believing, that there are such things as spooks. And then he told of two cases where murders had been committed that the spirits in the form of ghosts had appeared, and he knew because he was there and seen them with his own eyes. But he said it would be too long a story to tell all that he positively knew about these spirits or "spooks" as they used to call them. "I can name several people who saw what I did. And say, we sure did run and were scared almost out of our wits," he said. He said he would tell us more later when he had more time to convince us that what he was saying was positively true, and he would prove it to us.

Thrilling with an intense drama that makes it stand out far above preceding aviation films, RKO Radio's "The Woman I Love" proved itself one of the really memorable pictures of the season with its opening yesterday at the Cliftona Theatre.

For perhaps the first time on the screen, the personal side of war-time flyers' lives has been emphasized instead of their spectacular feats in the air. While by no means devoid of exciting aerial scenes, the chief interest of the picture centers on the human equation of a beautiful woman, married to one flyer, who finds herself falling in love with another—a young observer who, by the ironies of fate, proves to be her husband's best friend and inseparable companion at the front.

FOOD PROBLEM AT CORONATION TO TAX LONDON

Caterers Face Busy Day
As Crowds Enter the Stands at 7 a. m.

CHILDREN TO GET MILK

All-Night Task Confronted by Restaurant Men

LONDON, May 10 (UP)—London caterers are faced with the task of feeding the 1,000,000 spectators who will stand along the route of the coronation procession Wednesday. Further preparations must be made for those who will occupy government stands, witness the Coronation in Westminster Abbey, or occupy seats in homes and office buildings.

In that ticket holders must be at their seats not later than 7 a. m. and in some instances 2 hours earlier, it will be necessary to make provisions for supplying them with breakfast. Those not fortunate enough to hold tickets will be standing along the route all night and will create a constant demand for food.

To meet the demand, numerous preparations have been made by all branches of the catering trade. Hyde Parke and Green Park, both on the Coronation route, will remain open all night before the Coronation and refreshment buffets and marquees will give continuous service.

Children to Get Milk
Canteens serving milk and hot soup also will be erected in Hyde Park by the Milk Marketing Board. The Board will supply each of the 140,000 children from the London schools with a carton containing one-third of a quart of milk free of charge. This is the amount each child is entitled to have for a half-penny every morning at school.

The 12 marquees in the parks will be open every night until May 20 from 6 p. m. until midnight, when the parks close. This will be for the benefit of those who come to London to see the flood lighting. These arrangements are intended to provide for the million without seats.

More than 200,000 sandwiches as well as cakes and pastries in large quantities are included in the provision for the 85,000 persons who will occupy the government stands. The buffet where these will be served will have a covering in case of rain or sunshine. In addition, boys in uniform will go through the stands with cigarettes, candy and other light refreshments.

Nobility to Be Served
Peers and peeresses who attend the ceremony in Westminster Abbey will be supplied with a fork luncheon at the House of Lords at a cost of $2.65. It will consist of light dishes, sandwiches, cakes and coffee.

Wines, spirits and minerals also will be available "for which cash payment will be taken at time of ordering." The first breakfast will be served for the Officers of State at 5:30 a. m. a buffet will be served in Westminster Hall for those occupying seats in the Old Palace Yard.

One large store is providing breakfast for the occupants of the seats it has let at prices between $9 to $30 ($45 to $150). Hotels and restaurants are making plans to feed the millions who will swarm over other parts of London after the Coronation.

No Tax Bill in Session? Don't be Sure, Says Writer

Stewart Visions Need for More Revenue
or Severe Cuts

This is the first of three articles by Charles P. Stewart on the tax situation as seen from Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 10—Few words in our language have more synonyms, in common use, than tax. We dodge using that little

word at every chance, and some have been able to obliterate it, not only from their vocabularies, but from their bookkeeping as well. Aversion to the word, and all it connotes, on Capitol Hill, mounts to nausea these days. Anyone who says "tax" up there must accompany it with a smile, and it's wise to dodge, too. "There will be no tax bill this session," is the theme song of the congressional crooners in both houses. Senators and representatives all know they are whistling in the dark. There will be many revenue measures introduced; amendments levying imposts will be tacked on bills pending. Will any be passed; will one be passed? The answer is, of course, in the future, but what will happen is indicated in the present by the urgent needs, apparent to all.

Private industry has failed to absorb the unemployed at the rate and to the extent hoped for; thousands of the employed have failed to stay absorbed (see John Lewis and all his works), but with the supreme court upholding the Wagner labor relations law, the president, through the national labor board, is pretty well equipped to take care of that phase of the problem. It is certain to be a slow process, and in the meantime federal expenditures for direct and indirect employment will continue.

New Tax Base?
Senator Joseph T. Robinson, majority leader, evidently feels certain of this. Recently, the gentleman from Arkansas announced on the floor of the senate that government spending must be curtailed on an increase in revenues obtained. His voice was dolorous and his air was one of deepest gloom when he hinted of a new tax base. He stopped just short of naming it, and, in spite of questions, it still is anonymous. If Senator Robinson has found an untapped spring of revenue he is entitled to march shoulder to shoulder with Moses on the banks of the stream that gushed from the rock.

Under existing schedules we are taxed if we live and our estates suffer imposts when we die. The federal government has levied on our incomes and 34 of the states have taken their cut from the same source. It seems to be pretty well established that incomes already paying a tax are carrying about all the burden possible, if a further shrinkage in return from that source is to be avoided. That leaves incomes which have hitherto escaped, through exemptions bringing them below the levy limit and those again which no tax is assessed because of their source. Justices of the supreme court are exempt from income tax by constitutional provision; school teachers escape by legislative action. These by no means comprehend the list of privileged incomes and are simply mentioned to show over what a wide area of citizens they extend. An impression is growing in Washington that the smaller and many of the now exempt incomes will be brought within scope of a tax.

Another possible source of income is a general sales tax. Legislation to that end is not spoken of, even in whispers. But, and here is the bug under the chip, it has worked in other countries. Its proponents argue that it is just and as equitable as an excise levy can be. Those opposed assert it will fall heaviest on the "little fellow". There is no denying that, and there is no controverting the fact that the "big fellow," who certainly is carrying a heavy tax burden already, will pay it too. The shadow of a sales tax lies over the seventy-fifth congress, and senators and representatives do not like shadows, particularly those that are darkened by the frowns of "the folk back home." And think, too, of the hearty wails, long and bitter, which will go up from organizations of commercial interests.

Tax Bill Being Hatched?

An Senator Robinson's new tax base is yet to be disclosed. Apparently the only thing against which an assessment, in some form or other has not been levied is the pearly gates and golden pavements.

Under the constitution all levies for revenues must originate in the house of representatives (ways and means committee) and the senate must concur through action of the finance committee of that body of which Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi is chairman.

In the background is the joint committee on internal revenue and taxation. Its personnel consists of members of the ways and means and the senate finance committees. Chairman Robert Doughton of the former and Senator Harrison naturally included. Besides these there are several unofficial members, employed because of their knowledge of tax problems. The joint committee functions as a bill drafting and advisory body.

That briefly is the outline of the machine which grinds out the dollars which Uncle Sam spends, here, there and the other place. Neither Representative Doughton nor Senator Harrison cares to discuss the probability of new and heavier taxes; as a matter of cold fact they had rather not even men-taxes, levies, imposts, excises and duties—just to name a few of the official synonyms for the hated word—are below the expectations of the president, who has said he hoped for a total of nearly six billions.

The executive side of the picture is even gloomier. President Roosevelt has demanded cuts in the personnel of bureaus and departments, but no one in his right mind can conceive of enough blue slips being handed out to bring the salary saving item to any considerable figure. If an economy, if that is the proper word, is effected by that means, unemployment will mount to a point where—well, it's pretty bad right this minute. Between 800 and 900 are going to be dropped by the AA and are the telephone bells of senators and representatives jangling? A scurry is on to find them hooks in this vast federal factory, gaited not so much to the tempo of production as to the luxury of patronage.

All Comes to This

So it boils down to this: Senator Robinson says federal spending must be cut or an increase in revenues achieved.

For reasons of economy the president orders curtailment in the number of government employees.

The citizen in the street bids his dollar a fond adieu, for he feels it's going to take another wallop, and probably come back to father, shrunken to a two-bit piece.

ILL-FATED ZEPPELINS

APPALLING loss of life in the latest zeppelin disaster, the explosion of the Hindenburg, may sound the death knell of this form of air transportation. Abandoned by the United States Navy after three air catastrophes, the zeppelin in late years has been promoted chiefly by Germany's Dr. Hugo Eckener, who designed the Hindenburg but was not permitted to command her because Hitler felt he was insult or something when the ship was named Hindenburg instead of Hitler.

Plans for transatlantic heavier-than-air service appear to be still in the formative stage. Colonel Lindbergh has made several surveys in Ireland for a base for such service, but it is believed in aeronautical circles that the risk would be as great as that entailed in the Hindenburg venture.

The history of sausage aircraft has been particularly unfortunate. Introduced during the world war, when they were used for killing women and children behind the battle lines and made several raids on London, this form of aircraft has taken a horrible toll of life in the years that have elapsed since then. The fate of the Macon and the Shenandoah, of the U. S. Navy, are still fresh in memory.

BORAH'S NEW PARTY

THE report that Senator Borah and Senator Nye are contemplating the formation of a new political party will be accepted without a great deal of hesitation, at least by those who are familiar with the career and the personality of Senator Borah.

The spirit of the senator from Idaho is naturally restive and, strangely enough, does not grow serene or complacent with the years. Naturally, he is a Republican, but in the course of time wanders far and wide over the range. He is the head of his own little political party, is a conservative, a liberal and at times hovers on the borderline of Democracy.

The senator has an infinite capacity for political loyalties, so long as the element of conventionalism is not too heavily involved, and it is altogether possible that he can assume a position of leadership in an entirely new party, while at the same time, of course, remaining a Republican, a progressive, a conservative and even a reactionary.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

EVERYONE TALKS ECONOMY

WASHINGTON — The situation on the economy issue is like that of the shipwrecked sailor afloat on a raft in the middle of the ocean — water, water, water everywhere, but not a drink to drink.

Everybody in Washington is for economy: the President, Congress, Treasury, Federal Reserve Board, Republicans, everybody. But no one is doing a thing about it — except talk. Appropriation bills continue to click through with regularity, with but inconsequential savings or none at all.

To date the only economizing worthy of the name that has been achieved is the lopping off of a $37,000,000 construction item from the $526,000,000 Navy bill. On the $415,000,000 Army measure the only pruning that Congress seemed to find passable was the excision of $700,000 in pay increases. Next to relief, the expenditures of these two departments are the greatest in the Government.

The failure to do any appreciable budget trimming so far does not mean that an economy program will not be enacted this session. Such action is both possible and likely. But how and where, no one in authority is in a position to say.

ECONOMY CHAOS

This chaotic situation is due to a jumble within the Administration and Congress. The President, torn by conflicting counsel among his advisers, has not made up his mind what to do. And Congress, lacking White House leadership, is in an even worse stew.

On the Senate side there is considerable sentiment and agitation for a flat 10 per cent reduction on all appropriations. On the House side most of the leaders lean to a proposition that would give the President power to impound up to 15 per cent of appropriations after they have been voted.

This neat scheme simply means: "Eat your cake and have it too." The boys would be on record both for voting appropriations and for economy—with the buck passed to the White House to make the actual savings.

INNER CIRCLE TURMOIL

The turmoil in the inner circle is dominated by two schools of thought on the economy question.

One, led by Relief Administrator Hopkins, Secretary Ickes, and Secretary Wallace, is strongly opposed to any drastic curtailment of government expenditures. They contend that slashing the budget is deflationary and in direct contradiction to the fundamental theory of New Deal economics—to redistribute wealth by spending, raising the money through taxation on the profits and dividends accruing from the resulting recovery.

Not reduction of expenditures but increased taxes is the advice of this group. The second school, comprising Secretary Morgenthau, Reserve Board Chairman Eccles, and RFC boss Jesse Jones, insists that the time has arrived to clamp down on free spending and to balance the budget. It is this group that, indirectly, is fanning the flames of economy clamor on Capitol Hill.

Read in a Florida paper that "a city is given class not by the number of its citizens, but the kind and their civic aspirations and achievements." That may be a new idea in the Southland, but in this ville we recognized the fact long ago. Bob Maloney made an auto trip to South Carolina over the week end and was returning home when he was hailed by a man at the side of the highway. The pedestrian was none other than an educator who will join the high school staff next year, he being very anxious to reach Lancaster and there being no means of transportation, he took to the road and waved his thumb. A "fine chap," says Bob.

What a "bust" the day turned out to be after such a beautiful start. A quiet afternoon at home watching the rain and trying to arouse interest in a treatise entirely too something for my intellect.

CHAPTER 45

AS THE DOOR closed behind Mrs. Smith, Charles sprang to his feet.

"Lutman, you swine!" he exclaimed furiously. "Where is Jacqueline? If you don't tell me..."

Lutman raised a deprecatory hand. "My dear Charles," he said, "surely we've had enough hysteria for one day? Do you treat all your better-class clients as you treated Mrs. Smith?"

Charles ignored the question. "Where's Jacqueline?" he demanded. "What have you done with her? Either you tell me..."

"Or you will spring at my throat like a mad tiger and squeeze the truth out of me, eh?" He shook his head. "I seem to remember that you tried that on a previous occasion, but, if my memory isn't at fault, the mad tiger act wasn't a great success. Sit down, Charles, and be reasonable."

The lawyer, however, did not sit down; he remained where he was, facing Lutman threateningly. "What dirty game have you got on now, Lutman?"

"I suppose you wouldn't believe me if I said I have no game, either dirty or otherwise?"

"No, I shouldn't."

"Or if I told you that I'm just as much in ignominy as Jacqueline's whereabouts as you and her mother are?"

"That's a lie. Don't try the innocent pose, Lutman; it won't wash. And that yarn you spun to Mrs. Smith—that Jacqueline called on you and had tea with you and confided her plans to you—it was all lies. Mrs. Smith can believe them if she likes. She's fool enough to believe anything if it happens to suit her convenience, but she's really only too glad to have only herself to think of for a time—but I don't believe them, and I mean to know the truth."

"About Jacqueline's visit to me?"

"Jacqueline didn't visit you. She wouldn't set foot inside your flat."

"But she did, Charles," smiled Lutman. "She called on me of her own free will and we had tea together. Does that hurt your lover's pride? But there's no need to be jealous; it was all quite innocent and harmless—just a friendly kiss or two."

As Charles drew back his fist, Lutman took a couple of quick steps backward.

"Just a friendly kiss or two," he repeated, "but nothing more. You mustn't be too old-fashioned, Charles. Girls nowadays think nothing of a few kisses. All that 'No, no, a thousand times no' business is hopelessly out of date, and there are mighty few girls in these days who'd rather die than say yes."

"If you don't shut your filthy mouth, Lutman, I'll shut it for you."

The Colonel raised his eyebrows and regarded the other man searchingly.

"I can't make you out lately, Charles," he said. "All this violence—springing at my throat, insulting Mrs. Smith, clenching your fists and glaring and threatening—it's so unlike you. You were always such a perfect little gentleman, so delightfully spineless."

"Never mind me, Lutman. Where's Jacqueline?"

"I suppose we must attribute it to the transforming power of love, eh, Charles? The jellyfish feels the magic touch of the tender passion and promptly develops a backbone and rears itself up and spits fire in defense of its mate. But I'm not in the least scared of a jellyfish, even when it is in love."

The door was suddenly flung open, and Jim Asson, slamming it behind him, came striding into the room.

"What's the game, Lutman?" he demanded aggressively.

Lutman surveyed him with a look of pained surprise

You know why, don't you? Because just as soon as it becomes a real nuisance to me I can squash it."

"Are you going to tell me where Jacqueline is, Lutman, or are you not?"

"Believe it or not, Charles, the fact remains that I haven't the least idea where she is. Except that she was intending to leave home and look for a more congenial job than being Jim Asson's wife."

"All right," interrupted Charles. "Now listen, Lutman. I'm not bluffing this time. You're quite right when you say that I've altered lately; I have altered. I'm not in the least afraid of you now, or of what you can do. If you feel like smashing me, get on with it and smash me. That threat means nothing to me now."

"There's a song or something, isn't there, Charles, which says 'Ain't love grand?'"

"I just want you to understand, Lutman, that this time I mean what I say, and I'm warning you that unless you tell me what has become of Jacqueline, I'm going straight away to Scotland Yard and put the police on the trail."

The Colonel chuckled. "I shall lose no sleep over that, Charles. They'll probably find her knitting a jumper in some perfectly respectable bed-sitting room in the suburbs."

"We'll hope so, anyway," said Stuckey. "The point is that within an hour from now, unless you call off whatever dirty game you've got on and tell me where I can see Jacqueline, the police will be looking for her. And if anything happens to her—Good Lord, Lutman, if you hurt a hair of her head I'll smash every bone in your rotten carcass!"

The door was suddenly flung open, and Jim Asson, slamming it behind him, came striding into the room.

"What's the game, Lutman?" he demanded aggressively.

Roughage in Treatment of Constipation

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
We DISCUSSED yesterday some recent research in the subject of constipation, in which different kinds of food products were isolated and studied on patients as to their effect on sluggish bowels. Only one kind of food was given at a time, so that the results were not contaminated by mixed factors.

Today we want to consider the subject of roughage. Roughage is the indigestible part of food which gives the food residue bulk in the large intestine and stimulates the bowel to activity. Any part of the food that does not digest and does not suffer bacterial decomposition, or whose products are unabsorbed, contributes to the residue in the lower bowel. Some of these residues are bland and mechanically uninteresting, while some are believed to act as mechanical irritants and are called roughage.

Of the bland residues, it is surprising to find that eggs, especially raw eggs, milk, cheese, white bread, macaroni, potatoes and branless cereals, furnish a good part. Hurst, in England, was able to recover 5 per cent of the dry substance of meat, eggs and white bread, while he was able to recover 15 to 20 per cent of green vegetables, brown bread, carrots and turnips.

What is Roughage? The question of what is roughage is somewhat debatable. Fiber and cellulose are usually considered to be roughage, but cellulose is really as bland as any insoluble substance could be.

The foods which furnish roughage residues as distinguished from the bland residues are bran containing cereals, whole wheat bread, fruits and vegetables, particularly raw fruits, and salads and relishes. The structures that constitute the roughage of vegetable foods are (1) those held together by fibrous cells and the wood and fibers of stems, roots, the ribs of leaves, and the interiors of fruits; (2) those protected by the cutin or cork tissue in the structures of roots, stems, leaves and fruits; (3) seeds. Owing to a mucilaginous layer in the coats, some hard seeds become soft in the digestive canal or on cooking.

The constipated person requires more than the normal amount of roughage for distention. This is because he destroys more roughage than the normal person. Cowgill and Anderson estimate that the average person requires 50 parts of roughage, while the constipated individual requires, comparatively, 90 parts of roughage per pound of body weight. There is a type of constipation, however, in which the digestive canal is so sensitive that the patient cannot take roughage in any form.

Strong Field Assured For Beulah Inaugural

COLUMBUS, May 10—Stoutest field that ever has faced the barrier in an inaugural handicap at Beulah Park is promised for the renewal of the event which will feature the card of eight races on opening day, Saturday, May 15.

Already named for the mile race for a $1,200 purse is the good filly, Miss Ginbar, which won 11 times last year and has scored on four occasions this season.

Her most recent conquest was in the Dallas handicap at Arlington Downs. She is trained by Ernie Eslick for Mrs. E. N. Thompson.

W. C. Weant, veteran Kentucky horseman has named two horses already from the string of 23 he will race at Beulah Park. They are Miss Premier and the veteran stake horse, Prince Fox.

Another horse that is a handicap winner of the year in Texas and a nominee for the Beulah Park inaugural, is Ashen, owned and trained by C. A. Calhoun. Nominations for Beulah Park's opening day feature will not close until Thursday, May 13. Prospect is that Racing Secretary Hileman will assign weights to a limit field for the event.

Work is progressing nicely on the $100,000 program of improvements at Beulah Park and all will be well in hand by opening afternoon, May 15.

YESTERDAY'S HERO: Willis Hudlin, second string pitcher of the Cleveland Indians, who, when hauled into the breach created by Mel Harder's illness, turned in a four-hit performance to place his team in a tie for the league lead.

About This And That In Many Sports

Eyes of Racing Fans Turn Toward Beulah

The Derby over, attention of Circleville horse lovers turns toward Beulah Park and its racing course, grandstand and other accommodations. Several from the city attended the Park's open house, Sunday, with refreshments, free lunch and an inspection tour held. The meet starts next Saturday. Candescant ran at Churchill Downs, Saturday, but its jockey almost had to use a flashlight to find the way home. The Scott Carpenter horse, that has done quite well in many races, ran into tough luck (and the dust of all the other horses) while finishing last. The event followed the big Derby. In case you didn't already know War Admiral won the race, Pompoon was second, and Reaping Reward third. It was a nice race and a very excellent day, so reports have it. Ike Collins' Bernard F was eighteenth, but eating dirt from the heels of 17 horses wasn't so bad as the great Mr. Bradley's Billionaire had to do; he was last. Doc Phillips, semifinalist in the Pickaway Country Club's golf tourney two years ago, is a real enthusiast, especially when his iron is working well. The other day he was having a tough time (Harold Grant was beating him, and that rather puts the tooth expert out of sorts). Phillips dubbed and dubbed, and then dubbed some more, until his caddy said: "I wouldn't let that bother you, you'll get onto it one of these days." Phil almost hit the ceiling. Cleveland called a couple of thought-to-be has-beens out of the mothball bags during the week-end to whip the Yankees and Boston Sox. Ivy Paul Andrews, cast-off by Boston, New York and St. Louis, shutout the Yanks in Saturday's fray. Sunday, Willis Hudlin, who didn't win a game until the last start of the 1936 season, gave the Sox four hits to win 4-1. The Indians are tied for the top of the loop despite an epidemic of bad baserunning. What about the Redlegs? When Greecie Kampouris can hit three home runs in one game, something is wrong. Circleville high school carriers are scheduled for a journey to Washington C. H. Tuesday, and they might win, providing all the running and jumping members of the band go along. Rich Weldon, we understand, is champion pugilist of Mr. Zaenglein's organization. Ask the boy from Upper Arlington. Someone ought to do something about Frank L. Marion's 117 score in the headpin tourney. Until he topped the score there was a lot of interest in the meet. Since 117 is higher than the score that won several Columbus tourneys, other legkies are not willing to spend their cash. There will be handsome prizes for second and third places, too, bowlers, so why not get busy?

TWO SAUNDERS YOUTHS MAY EMULATE OWENS

COLUMBUS, May 10.—(UP)—A pair of dusky youngsters that aspire to climb to fame through the same medium as Jesse Owens, the individual hero of the 1936 Olympics, today stood apart from the maze of scholastic athletes who have taken part in a crowded invitational relay program this Spring.

The youngsters were John and Joe Saunders of Glendale high in suburban Cincinnati. These Negro lads stole the week-end spotlight from other scholastic competitors when they teamed to score 41 points in the Miami University relays at Oxford.

FELLER SPEEDS BACK HOME FOR SCHOOL 'EXAMS'

CLEVELAND, May 10.—(UP)—Bob Feller put thoughts of "strike-outs" and "fast balls" from his mind today, to hurry home and "crum" for his final examination at the Van Meter, Ia., high school.

The 18-year-old pitching sensation of the big leagues took along a Cleveland Indians uniform, a ball and two baseball gloves—he thought he might find time to play catch with his father, William Andrew Feller, out behind the barn on the Feller farm, three miles from Van Meter.

Bob obtained permission from C. C. Slapnicka, vice-president of the Indians, to travel in a private plane to Des Moines so that he would arrive in Van Meter in plenty of time to brush up on his history, psychology, English and physics for exams on Thursday and Friday. He had been studying under a private tutor since the baseball season opened.

Feller will rejoin the Indians in Chicago May 16, and Iowa fans planned to make that "Bob Feller Day." Special trains will run to Chicago if the Indians' management will promise that Bob will be given the pitching assignment against the White Sox.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

MAKE THEM CONFESS

DUPLICATE players get one kick out of the game which never is received by rubber players. They have the opportunity of seeing results obtained at other tables and sometimes can hardly believe their own eyes as they note the incredible contracts that are made or defeated. It always is fun then to spread the hand and get the culprits to explain just what chain of results led to the peculiar scores.

Three-No Trumps by South was the final contract here at all tables in a duplicate tournament. At all but two tables, South made 4-No Trumps, getting three tricks in each minor, two in hearts and two in spades. One declarer made only three because, when he led the spade 9, West covered with the K. The declarer ducked this, but on the next spade round he took the Ace, as he could not afford to finesse, which would beat his contract if it failed.

Mrs. Kay Coffin of Indianapolis.

one of the best woman experts in the country, actually managed to defeat the contract, holding it to 2-No Trumps. She had listened to the bidding, which was 1-Diamond by South, 1-Spade by North and 3-No Trumps by South. She reasoned that South must have exactly two little spades; if only a singleton, he would not have jumped into 3-No Trumps; if as many as three, or two to the Q or Ace, he would have forced in some way to see whether North wanted to rebid his spades. So she eschewed her natural lead of hearts and offered the spade K. The declarer, reckoning from this that the spades were all bunched at his left, let it go and tried the spade finesse on the second round. He now had no way to take more than eight tricks and was therefore down one.

More than 300 Eagles took part in the jubilee celebration of the Circleville Lodge, No. 685, and the twelfth district meeting and initiation held Sunday afternoon and evening. Delegations were present from Springfield, London, Hillsboro, Greenfield, Columbus and Washington C. H.

Both the district meeting and an entertainment, open to the public were held in Memorial hall Circleville Aerie officers opened the lodge for the district meeting, and the degree team of London Aerie was in charge of the initiation. Six candidates were initiated.

Rain Reduces Crowd

Due to the steady downpour of rain during the afternoon, a small crowd attended the open meeting that followed the district session.

James H. Kellner, Columbus, state president of the lodge, praised the work of the local lodge in clearing its debts, increasing the membership and improving the lodge home. Observance of Mother's Day, he explained, originated in the Eagles lodge in 1904, and through the fraternity, the celebration has gained prominence. In addition, the lodge has boosted legislation for the benefit of mothers and families, including the workmen's compensation, old-age pensions, and mother's pensions.

Mortgage Destroyed

A $2,000 mortgage, the last indebtedness of the lodge, was burned at the public meeting. George Fitzpatrick, treasurer of the lodge, was in charge of the ceremony, said the mortgage was written for $10,000 on July 2, 1928. He announced since payment of the mortgage the lodge has a balance of approximately $1,500. The lodge was instituted in 1904.

Music for the public meeting was furnished by Hilaire Haeccker, city, and Frankie Winsell, Chillicothe, accordionists; Harvey Morrison, Clarksburg, who features a one man band including piano, harmonica, drum and vocal music and a quartet consisting of Pryor Timmons, Clarksburg; Coyt Clarey, Atlanta; Clarence Radcliffe, Williamsport, and Elzie Radcliffe, Columbus. Willis Clarey, Atlanta, was accompanist. Tap dancing numbers were given by Virginia Saul, Chillicothe. Elzie Radcliffe and Coyt Clarey sang solos.

Mayor Welcomes Visitors

Mayor W. J. Graham, chairman of the program committee, presented the address of welcome and introduced state and district officers including Emmett Passmore, Washington C. H. chairman of the district; C. A. Roberts, Springfield, district director; and Charles Snyder, Columbus, state treasurer of the lodge.

FOUR BIDS REJECTED

Four bids submitted to J. F. Mavis, service director, for street oil and patching materials were rejected Saturday because labor and materials were not listed separately. New bids will be asked. R. P. Enderlin was awarded the contract to furnish 400 feet of eight-inch vitrified sewer pipe.

LETTERS ISSUED

Letters of administration in the estate of S. E. Evans, Washington township, who died April 12, were issued Saturday in probate court to the widow, Mrs. Mary A. Evans.

dress but with a big feather fly swatter; the tourists and visitors and ordinary Londoners filled the streets which were decorated for miles with flags, streamers and loyal mottoes.

The official program of a celebration that really will continue for weeks opens tonight with a state banquet at Buckingham palace for 450 guests of the king and queen. It will be a full dress affair. James W. Gerard and Gen. John J. Pershing, of the American delegation, may wear, respectively, their new knee pants and General Grant uniform.

But cafes, public houses, theatres, movies and the streets themselves provided the color for most of the visitors.

There were few, despite the dismal weather and the dislocation of traffic caused by the bus strike, who stopped to complain or to be depressed by recollection that King George is being crowned only because King Edward VIII, the one time "prince charming," left his throne and his people for love of a foreign born woman.

Farther Than Miles

Edward, with Mrs. Wallis Simpson, seemed much farther away than the mere miles between London and the Chateau De Candé in France.

The coronation is a symbol which means that England, Great Britain and the empire go on. King George is the 40th sovereign of England—outranking the two Cromwells and behind those 40 were 19 Saxon kings.

This Wednesday was to have been the coronation day of Edward VIII. His brother George stepped in at the moment Edward, as Duke of Windsor, stepped out.

Since the last coronation in 1911, that of George V, father of the monarch to be crowned Wednesday, there have been events that have shaken the world. In Europe, the monarchies of Russia, Germany, Austria-Hungary, Turkey, Spain, Montenegro have passed. An age of dictators began. Four years of world war were succeeded by a troubled peace to safeguard which Great Britain is spending $7,500,000,000 for armaments.

This coronation finds the empire a commonwealth of nations, with the Irish Free State linked to the mother country only by the most tenuous of ties and the dominions generally sovereign states, with India starting on the path to

Streets Crowded

But there was little time today for such thoughts of these. Milling in the jammed streets of the west end, the crowds sought what fun they could and looked forward to Wednesday and the crowning of a new king and queen who have, as their heir, an 11 year old princess who some day may rule as Elizabeth II.

juice and a collapsible rubber boat given them by Al Williams, Navy speed flier.

The 10-passenger plane had been remodeled so that all available space could be used for fuel. Merrill took 1,200 gallons and 60 gallons of oil. He estimated that this gave him a flying range of 4,500 miles, 1,000 miles more than he needs.

The ship is equipped with constant speed propellers, an automatic pilot, a gyro-compass and a two-way radio, which Merrill used to transmit hourly reports. He is regularly employed by Eastern Air lines in the United States on the New York-Miami run, and Lambie has been his co-pilot. Lambie said the London flight was "just a break in the monotony of the run."

Merrill was to have carried news-reel pictures of the dirigible Hindenburg disaster, but at the last minute he was informed that "London has banned the films because it doesn't want a shadow cast over the coronation ceremonies." However, he did carry "still" pictures of the tragedy.

The pilot, who made the two-way ocean flight last year with Harry Richman, described this trip as the "American goodwill coronation flight." He indicated his firm belief that he would be back in New York on schedule.
